General Motors Breaks Ten Points From Its Former High

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Another day of great irregularity in Wall Street left stocks not materially changed, although there were in the course of the day some very violent changes. The opening was strong with advances averaging two points in active stocks and the class of General Motors running up ten points. General Motors broke thirteen points from its high price of $110, to $97, and then rallied to $100. The market was quiet and strong at an average of nearly two points above the closing of the day.

Money went as high as 12 per cent on call, but renewed more at 10 per cent. Professional Wall Street is bullish—consistently so, but conservative brokers resist the way the money market is handled. On Thursday afternoon, a few conservative brokers took place, based on expectation that the president would sign the railroad bill. The market was quiet and strong at an average of nearly two points above the closing of the day.

For the advance and decline in today's market to explanation of the movement of the market, Wall Street operators are very busy and they are taking advantage of the temporary rally expected to accompany the signing of the railroad bill by the president. The market was quiet and strong at an average of nearly two points above the closing of the day.
